

'Is it important who carries out electrical installation work in my home?'

Yes.

Electrical installation work must be carried out only by people who have the knowledge, skill and experience needed to avoid danger to themselves and others. It's easy to make an electrical circuit work - it's far harder to make the circuit work safely.

Homeowners and Landlords should ensure they only use contractors listed on the Electrical Safety Register as these contractors are assessed by 3rd party experts to ensure that they have:

- Adequate knowledge and skill
- Relevant insurance
- Up to date qualifications
- Suitable equipment
- Offer suitable warranties

Therefore employing a contractor listed on the Electrical Safety Register to undertake the work is vital to ensure these standards have been met.

Visit www.electricalsafetyregister.com to find your nearest tradesperson.

Electrical Safety Register

incorporating

